EXTENSIVE PROGRAM PLANNED

First Venture Along This Line—Reservations Must Be Made in Advance and Applications Can Be Handed in Until Saturday Afternoon, May 4.

Arrangements are being made by the Perryopolis Volunteer Fire Department for its first annual banquet on May 10 in the Perry High School Auditorium. Interest in the affair runs high and it is thought that this initial venture of the volunteer fire department will be successful.

The committee has decided to accept applications until Saturday. It is necessary to require reservations in advance because it must be known how many plates must be supplied. Any applications made after Saturday will be refused.

Old Sores, Piles, Burns and Scalds Heal Very Quickly.

Graham & Co., of Connellsville and S. A. Lowe & Co. of Scottsdale sell an ointment called San Cura that surely does do anything it is advertised to do or money back.

Thos. F. McCauley, Copperstown, Pa., cut his finger-bleeding poison seal in arm awfully-terribly—friends despair—said arm must come off. San Cura Ointment drew out water and dark pus—agonies ceased—arm and hand saved.

It quickly drew out all poison from sores, fever sores, ulcers, boils, carbuncles, cuts, burns, scalds and bruises and healed without leaving a scar.

For itching, bleeding or protruding piles, nothing can equal it. While thousands of cases are recorded where eczema, tetter and salt rheum were cured in the shortest possible time, San Cura Ointment is 25 and 50 cents a jar.

Everybody should use San Cura Soap. It's antiseptic, destroys all germs of life, keeps the skin clear, soft and velvety. 25 cents. Thompson's Medical Co., Pittsburg, Pa.

It's exhilarating, stimulating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow abundantly long, strong and beautiful. It at once imparts a sparkling brilliancy and velvety softness to the hair, and a few weeks' use will cause new hair to sprout all over the scalp. Use it every day for a short time after which two or three times a week will be sufficient to complete whatever growth you desire.

You can surely have pretty, soft, lustrous hair, and lots of it, if you will just get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and try it as directed.

A. A. Clarke guarantees it.

them I guarantee that will be sufficient to carry the team through the season.

This is the only remedy to be used on such people for without a guarantee there is no assurance when the exhibitors promoters intend to skip out and leave the team to its own resources and the players salaries unpaid which must be paid by future owners in case the former parties are not affiliated with organized clubs.

The minor league team that is backed by honest people is fortunate and the clubs that have clubs financed by outsiders is taking a long chance on their future if they allow these men however well meaning they may be to take a franchise without giving a bond that they will finish the season and leave the town and territory free from any obligation that will not cause it trouble at any future time.

Now is the time to look into affairs like this when the season is young but if the reason is not started make them come across before they start a club that they cannot drop at the first sign of a financial deficit, or run along as affairs did at Steubenville last year, and which has caused the home owners so much trouble in getting their honest rights this year.

A Beautiful Dream.

"The King is dead; long live the King!"

The Republican party of Pennsylvania has passed into the hands of the Progressive element represented in the person of William Flinn by the grace of Theodore Roosevelt once more.

Political Boss.

No State Convention has ever so completely dominated the Progressive Convention which has just adjourned at Harrisburg to meet again and again it is necessary to bolster the bossism of its master.

Hessen there have been in Pennsylvania, but none so bold and brutal as William Flinn.

Others have dominated, but they were careful not to intrude their personality.

The steel glove was covered with velvet. Their orders were carried out in such a manner as to create the least friction.

Autocratic displays of authority were carefully avoided, and for the most part the success of the party was put long above every other interest or consideration.

The irony of the situation lies in the fact that the Progressives made their campaign largely on the plea that the Republican party of Pennsylvania was in the thrall of bossism, being dominated by Senator Penrose; that the Republican State organization was a mere machine executing his personal orders; that free speech and free action were denied, that the voice of the people were stifled; and that the success of the Progressive movement would shatter the bond of bossism and restore to the people their ancient heritage of independence.

It was a beautiful dream of the Rule of the People, and the awakening was the Wielder of the Whip, William Flinn!

The Cure of the Insane.

Cambria county, like most Western Pennsylvania counties of industrial growth and progress, finds itself embarrassed for lack of quarters for the care of its insane.

The Johnstown Leader says:

There is but one solution for the problem that now confronts Cambria county in the matter of caring for its insane, and that is to construct an institution for that purpose and to set it ready for use at the earliest possible moment consistent with wise planning and good work. Any other course would be infamous and unbusinesslike.

There is not an insane asylum in the State to which Cambria county can send its patients. For that reason there are in the county jail at the present time an even dozen insane persons who ought not to be there, but should be in institutions adapted for their confinement and care under the direction of medical men skilled in diseases of the mind.

Persons confined in a prison constructed for lawbreakers is the height of inhumanity.

Psychic county is in a similar plight, but is making some efforts to remedy its situation. The plans include suitable buildings and grounds for the care of the poor, the insane and prisoners under workhouse sentence, but the project is predicated on the scale of the county's present poor fund, which is unimpaired with Connelville coking coal and is very valuable.

Until we sell our coal we will probably have to worry along as we are.

The Washington Reporter wants reform in the Republican organization of Washington county. It agrees with the Cambria Notes that the County Committee should be reorganized on Progressive lines. "In this case of re-organizing," says Editor Acheson, "it should be possible to secure watchers at the polls without paying them $5 per day." We were not aware that this custom, the invention of the saintly William Flinn, had been infringed upon in Washington county. We were under the impression it was sacred to Allegheny county and the Flinn machine.

"Shall the People rule?"

Editor Acheson has our sympathy. He is an honest, but not a wise, Progressive. With extreme solicitude he put his faith in Flinn.

The somewhat somnolent Official Organ of the Young Men's Democratic Club wants to know when and where "labor" continues to enter the picture against Democratic tinkering with the Tariff. The Senate Finance Committee can enlighten the O. C. on this point. This committee's file contains scores of such petitions or protests signed by workmen. Many of them come from Western Pennsylvania. One was filed recently by the employees of Jones & Laughlin containing over 5,000 names.

Doss Flinn's Progressiveness turns out to have been purely political.

Editor Acheson's Town Meeting idea didn't meet with favor at Harrisburg. Machine methods suited Boss Flinn better.

Let's hear no more Progressive yappings about bossism.

When Flinn exposed the Roosevelt cause, The Courier said he was trying to ride back to power on T. R.'s coat-tails; he had ridden a very successful race.

In spite of safety couples every now and again a brakeman is brought to the hospital with a crushed hand.

The State Board of Education has announced that it will approve no more plans for new school houses unless proper provision is made for children's playgrounds. This may be embarrassing to some districts, but as a rule School Boards will have little difficulty in complying with the requirement, and the benefit to the children cannot be overestimated by the cost expressed in dollars.

Government prosecution of the Beef Trust has not prevented beef prices from soaring skyward again.

Connellsville promises to become a center of Italian journalism.

The peace-maker may be blessed, but he is sometimes buffeted also.

Massachusetts was a draw.

How-ous are usually pleasant affairs, but a natural gas blow-out is an abomination.

It seems to be moving day in B. & O. official circles.

The Town Council evidently does not want its deliberations disturbed by the Circus.

The News asserts that all Republican leaders of thought blame the high cost of living on the existing tariff. There must be a frightful preponderance of unthoughtful Republican leaders, or else The News is given to statements reckless enough to procure it a membership in the Annals Club.

The Western Maryland is making itself first-class since it has determined to come to Connelville.

The contractor for the postoffice building expects to finish it by the close of the year. It will be a very appropriate Christmas gift for Connelville.

The Masontown trolley accident might have been avoided if the line car had kept a line out and the passenger car had kept a line on the line car.

The B. & O. shop furlough lasted hardly long enough to go fishing.

AMERICAN MUSIC ISN'T BAD

David Blapham Says Much of Our Composers Well With Best of Foreign Composers.

At a recent recital which he gave in Carnegie hall, David Blapham said: "There is just as much bad music written abroad as there is in this country, only we do not always hear it. When we get foreign music we always seek the best. We buy the works of the best composers and we give no attention to any others. Here at home we hear all that is published. We cannot avoid the bad if we would. We hear it on the streets in spite of ourselves, and we grow to think, unless we take pains to study American music, that the most of it is poor. This is not true. Some of it is very bad, but much of it is as good as that written by the best foreign composers."

In proof of his faith in the good quality of American music Mr. Blapham makes it a rule to devote a portion of each of his programs to the work of American composers. While all of his audience may not agree with him that these songs equal the best of the foreign works, it certainly should be an inspiration to American composers to have so excellent an artist place such faith in them and prove his faith by giving their works the benefit of his renditions. Mr. Blapham laments the prevalence of ragtime, and urges his audiences to lead all their influence toward its abolishment. To him music is worthless unless taken with sufficient seriousness to express a lofty, or at least an intelligent, idea.

Country Life School.

It really is astonishing what nature offers in exchange for common sense and how extremely stingy she is with people who are lazy, ignorant and unimaginative. It is no use for anyone to go into the country to be happy just by force; especially if they rely on violence and pinks and birds to make them happy; when they do not even know one flower or bird or fruit from another and do not care to know.

My conviction is that there ought to be a school in each large city to teach applicants how to be happy in the country—how to get acquainted with country things and how to enjoy them. Something of the sort is under way through the work of our agricultural colleges, and of that we will have something to say in the future. It needs, however, a special department in all our city schools, where those who wish can go and prepare themselves for country life.—E. P. Fowall, in the Outlook.

RECORD OF A GREAT MEDICINE

Doctors Could Not Help Mrs. Templeton—Regained Health through Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound.

Hooper, Nebraska.—"I am very glad to tell how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped me. For five years I suffered from female troubles so I was scarcely able to do my work. I took doctors' medicines and used local treatments but was not helped. I had such awful bearing down pains and my back was so weak I could hardly walk and could not ride. I often had to sit up nights to sleep and my friends thought I could not live long. At my request my husband got me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I commenced to take it. By the time I had taken the seventh bottle my health had returned and I began doing my washing and was a well woman. At one time for three weeks I did all the work for eighteen boarders with no signs of my old trouble returning. Many have taken your medicine after seeing what it did for me. I would not take $1000 and be where I was. You have my permission to use my name if it will aid anyone."—Mrs. SUSIE TAMPLERON, Hooper, Nebraska.

The Pinkham record is a proud and peerless one. It is a record of constant victory over the obstinate ills of woman—ills that lead to despair. It is an established fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored health to thousands of such suffering women. Why don't you try it if you need such a medicine?

SCOTSDALE SCHOOL MILLAGE IS FIXED

Board Reduces the Tax Rate
a Half Mill This Year.

STRONG APPEAL MADE TO ALUMNI

Organization Classed as the Only
Dormant Thing in Local High School Waxes—Other Notes of News in and Around the Mill Town.

Special to The Courier.
SCOTSDALE, May 2.—At the meeting of the Scottdale Board of Education the millage was set for the coming year, at a rate of eight and one-half mills, this being a decrease of one-half a mill over the rate of last year. This sum it is considered by the Finance Committee will cover the expenses of the school year, the division of sinking fund tax and the general fund being made by Tax Collector W. S. Wiley in his monthly deposits of the money collected. The amount of the taxes collected to be used for sinking fund will be one and one-half mills, this method being much easier than dividing the amount on the duplicate and charging in these proportions to each taxable. The amount of assessed valuation is $273,820, giving an approximate tax of $1,703.47. The board also went over the exonerations presented by Tax Collector W. S. Wiley in preparation for their final taking up at a later date. The work of the board is rounding up nicely for the closing of the year. The members of the board present were Aaron Loucks, President; A. L. Keister, J. L. Reynolds, A. C. Overholt and O. A. Rush and Secretary O. L. Hess. Those absent were Robert Skepp and Jesse M. Hnead.

TO ALUMNI.
The following open letter has been addressed to all graduates of the Scottdale High School, and says:
"In June, 1911, you were asked as graduates of the High School to contribute $1 as a membership fee to the Alumni Association of the Scottdale High School. Scarcely one-third of you have responded to this very 'usual' demand."

"The High School is one of the most progressive in Western Pennsylvania. In scholarship and athletics, it ranks among the foremost. The High School building is one of the best equipped as well as the most artistic to be found in the State. The only dormant element is the Alumni Association, and it sometimes awakens itself in the spring of the year to give a banquet in honor of the graduating class."

"Last year in this attempt, without the support of all the graduates, a debt was incurred. It is for you to realize that because we are not interested, this happened. It is for you to realize that this is your town and your High School, that as it is absolutely necessary to you, so are you absolutely necessary to it."

"It is for you to realize that your dollar is absolutely necessary to the Association and that as much as you feel free to give will be appreciated in freeing the association from its small debt. This money should be paid to the Secretary Miss Evelyn Hess, or to the Treasurer, Charles S. Wiley."

INTEREST GROWS.
Interest is increasing in the revival meetings being held at the Christian church, under the leadership of Evangelist W. R. Carter and that he is proving himself a forceful gospel preacher and is winning the confidence of the people. The music of the choir and the solos of Miss Anderson are great features of the meetings. Shop meetings are being held and the Monday meetings for business men will be held at the Y. M. C. A. rooms on Friday. On Sunday Evangelist Carter will deliver his great lecture on "Home" in the Baptist church at 2:30 o'clock. Rev. O. J. Howarth, the pastor of the Christian church, invites everyone to the meetings which begin each evening at 7:45 o'clock.

DISTRICT MEETING.
The Scottdale District Sunday school association will hold its annual meeting in the United Brethren church on Tuesday, May 16, at 7:30 and 8:30 o'clock. At the afternoon session there will be an interesting and helpful conference on some practical phases of Bible school work. At the evening session addresses of a public character will be delivered, one of the speakers being Rev. H. R. Piper, of the Methodist Episcopal church. For all interested in any way in Bible school work, sessions will be of particular help.

FACE AND SCALP SORE
RESULT OF NEGLECTED ECZEMA
THIS IS PREVENTABLE.

Try This Remedy at Our Risk.
Failure to treat eczema of the face early, or the wrong kind of treatment, almost certainly results in spreading and aggravating the complaint.
We have seen cases where the face and scalp had become one continuous sore, due to the violent itching and scratching.
Fortunately this need not happen now, for our new skin remedy, Saxon Salve, always the itching so that the skin is no longer lacerated by the finger nails. And it sinks into and soothes the skin so thoroughly, and is so wonderfully healing in its nature, that it kills all germ life in the skin and promotes a speedy cure.

All who have a skin affection of any kind, eczema, barber's itch, itchy poisoning or any eruption, can try Saxon Salve at our risk and the results are not wholly satisfactory we give back the money. Graham & Company, Drugists, Conneltsville, Pa.

"SYRUP OF FIGS" FOR INDIGESTION, BILIOUSNESS AND CONSTIPATION

Better Than Castor Oil, Calomel or Cathartics to Cleanse
Your Stomach, Liver and 30 Feet of Bowels, Harmless Laxative for Men, Women and Children.

Primitive folks did not need laxatives. They lived outdoors, ate plenty of fruit, and all of their food was coarse. We modern people are different. We exercise too little, eat little fruit, and our food is too fine—too rich.
We simply can't have our ten yards of bowels clogged up, liver choked with sour bile and stomach full of foul effluvia matter and feel well. It means that the food and waste retained in the stomach and filthy fest of bowels ferment—decay. This decay creates poisons, gases and acids, and these poisons are sucked into the blood through the very ducts intended to suck in the nutriment. Then we have sick headaches, become dull, bilious, tongue coated, nervous, mean, don't digest, and we feel miserable all over. So we must make our choice. We must live like primitive folks, also we must take artificial means to move the excess bile and waste matter on and out of the system.
The safest, most harmless and effective stomach, liver and bowel cleanser and regulator for men, women and children is delicious Syrup of Figs, which doesn't irritate, grip or weaken. Its effect is the effect of fruits. It is composed entirely of luscious figs, senna and aromatics. Don't think you are drugging yourself. Syrup of Figs can be constantly used without harm.
Ask your druggist for "Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna," and see on the label that it is prepared by The California Fig Syrup Company. This is the only genuine—the sold reliable. Refuse, with contempt, the so-called "Fig Syrup" imitations sometimes offered to deceive you.

The Typos won the basketball championship of Fayette county without having to play a game and it is to be hoped that the Herald will not throw up the baseball question in the same way.

Forty Years Ago almost every mother thought her child must have PAREGORIC or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep and a few drops of SLEEE FROM WHICH THERE IS NO WAKING. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labeling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which is poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrup," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without your or your physician know of what it is composed. CLASS OF SIX AT EVERSON

Township Gave Class Play, "The Col-

Their Regular Graduation Exercises at Geyer's Opera House—Program.

SCOTSDALE, May 2.—Scottdale and Everson each had graduation exercises last evening. In Scottdale, Geyer's opera house was crowded to its capacity by the friends of the graduating class of the East Huntingdon Township High School, which rendered their class play, "The College Chap." Tonight the township will have their graduation exercises in the opera house with Constable Geyer as the speaker.

AN ARRAY OF SPLENDOR.
Pageant of Spectacular Glory Shown by the Hagenbeck-Wallace Show.

The circus parade, having become an honored institution with the public and the event looked forward to with keen interest, the great Hagenbeck-Wallace Show, which exhibited here Tuesday, May 7, have not abandoned a feature so essential to complete realization of all circus day calls for and promises. Rather, there has been greater effort than ever before to make the pageant of the present season more inspiringly beautiful and novel than those that have gone before.

With complete reconstruction and enlargement of the Hagenbeck-Wallace Show the task became comparatively easy, merely calling for a financial outlay in proportion to that in other departments. The thousand and four hundred horses were sufficient in number, but the demands of the parade designers were for new floats, dens, cages, lairs, tableaux cars, costumes, vehicles, chariots and new costumes and trappings throughout. An appropriation amounting to a small fortune was called for and made. Artists who have made a specialty of festival decoration designed the many new wagons, directed their construction and personally worked out the splendid color schemes. Expert costumed designers designed and constructed the variegated uniforms and regalia, using the richest clothes and finest materials. The clothes of gold and silver and howdahs with which the elephants are covered and bedecked are of Oriental design and architecture and rich in coloring beyond description. There was music an orchestra and vocal solo by Misses Lulu Kane, Miss Edna M. Hayes and Miss Elsie Myers. The graduates were Ethel Piri, Cecil Webb, Mary Smith, Albert Whaley, Wilbur Hamilton and Harry Plunk. The address of the evening was by Rev. J. J. Funk, pastor of the Westminster church, and the diplomas were presented by Landis Tungen, supervising principal of the Scottdale schools.

Those who took part in the comedy drama in the township exercises at Geyer's opera house were, Clarence Love, Harry Ruth, Arthur Brown, Paul Bowser, Earl Loucks, Ralph Richter, Edwin Steele, Lester Sidway, Chester Lehigh, Leona Kirt, Olive Steele, Irene Pitts, Margaret Dodson, Mary Pelgar, Minnie Gibbons and Pearl DePriest. Each character was well presented. The music was by the Ridgeway orchestra of Scottdale.

CHAPTER IV.

The Beginning of Trouble.
Her hand was in mine, my arm around her waist, when the officer bowed before us. He had been

If I Leave You Now as You Request I Must First Have Promise of Welcome Again.

but a dim figure in the afternoon, but now I saw him for a tall, slender man, somewhat swarthy of face, with black hair and moustache, and a keen eye, attired in the green and white of the Queen's Rangers. He smiled, but with a sarcastic curl to the upper lip not altogether pleasant.

"Your pardon, Mistress Claire," he said boldly, sweeping me with a supercilious glance, "but am I mistaken in believing this waltz was pledged to me?"

"My mistake, captain," her lips smiling, her eyes steady. "It seems I overlooked a promise made during the afternoon."

"Oh, indeed," he turned toward me, staring insolently. "The hero of the rescue. I presume."

I felt the restraining pressure of her hand upon my sleeve, and her voice replied calmly, before I succeeded in finding words.

"This is the gentleman who protected me from the mob, if that is what you mean. Permit me to present Captain Grant of the Queen's Rangers, Lieutenant—pardon my having already forgotten your name."

"Fortesque," I stammered, intensely hating the necessary deception.

"Ah, yes—Lieutenant Fortesque of the Forty-second British Foot." We bowed coldly, neither extending a hand, the captain, twisting his moustache as he continued staring at me.

"Fortesque," he repeated slowly. "Fortesque; not of this garrison, I believe."

"No, from New York," coolly. "I regret having interfered with your program."

"Don't mention it; there are other ladies present, and no doubt, your gallant act was worthy the reward; a pleasant evening, sir," and he withdrew aside, still military. Eager to lose as little as possible of the measure, I swung my partner forward, catching glimpse again of the man's face as we circled.

"Pleasant disposition," I ventured, without meaning to be unkind.

"Oh, very," and her eyes met mine frankly. "But you must not quarrel with him; that is his one specialty, you know."

"Is the warning on your account, or my own?"

"Both, perhaps. Captain Grant's family and mine are neighbors—or were before war intervened—and between our fathers exists a life-long friendship. I could never consent to be the cause of his quarrelling with anyone, and I have reason to know how quick tempered he is."

"I have little use for any man who swaggers about seeking trouble," I returned, as she hesitated. "It has been my experience that there is usually cowardice back of such a disposition."

"Not in this case," earnestly. "Captain Grant's courage has been sufficiently tested already. I warn you not to presume on your theory so far as he is concerned. I advise the safer course."

"What is that?"

"Her eyes met mine, smiling slightly, and yet grave enough in their depths. 'To let this one dance prove sufficient reward for your act of rescue.'"

"You request this?"

"Oh, you must not place the entire burden of decision on me, sir. I can only suggest."

"I'll leave Captain Grant any authority to dictate who shall be your partner?"

Her cheeks lifted, and then fell before my gaze.

"He at least assumes the power, and generally with fair success. I must ask to be excused from discussing this matter further now, but—" her voice trembled to a whisper, "I—am sure your safety depends upon your leaving me."

Astonished by these words, suddenly wondering if she suspected me, scarcely comprehending what she meant, I stared into her face, as we circled the room. Grant stood still against the wall where we left him, his eyes fastened moodily on the crowd. I realized his presence, yet my whole thought was concentrated on the girl, the "wonder" of her hair, braving my lips, her steps lightly following the music, her eye downcast into the cheeks there came a flush of pink, and she glanced up to read the surprise in my face.

"Do I need to say more?"

"Yes, you must," I insisted, "you can never believe I would leave you because of personal fear."

"I did not know—at first. Now I realize it will require a higher motive to influence you; not love of life, but love of country."

I felt the closer clasp of her fingers on my guiding hand, and knew I took a deep breath of surprise.

"Lean your head just a little closer," she whispered. "I—I know you, Major Lawrence, and—and I wish you well."

How I kept to the measure I cannot imagine, for, in an instant, all my house of cards crumbled into nothingness. She knew me, this blue-eyed girl; knew me, and sought to aid my mission, this daughter of a loyalist, this lady of the Blended Rose. It was inconceivable, and yet a fact—my name had been whispered by her lips.

Suddenly she looked up laughing, as though to make others feel that we conversed lightly. We passed Grant, even as I held my breath, almost afraid to venture with words. Yet they would not be restrained.

"You certainly startled me, how do you know this? Surely we have never met before?"

"I refuse to be questioned, sir; it means nothing how I know—the fact that I do should be sufficient."

"Must Mistress Claire—"

"Rather Mistress Mortimer."

"Yet the captain called you Claire."

"And we were children together—you can scarcely claim such familiarity."

"I warrant you can name me."

"Allen, is it not, sir?"

What was it the witch did not know! This was no guess work, surely, and yet how could her strange knowledge be accounted for? Sweet as the face was, greatly as it had attracted me, there was nothing to awaken a throb of memory. Surely I could never have seen her before, and forgotten; that would have been impossible. The music ceased, leaving us at the farther extremity of the hall.

"And now you will go?" she questioned eagerly.

"You mean, leave here?"

"Yes; you said once tonight, that but for me you would be riding yonder. I realized all you meant, and you must not remain. The guard lines are black tonight, and you can get through, but if you wait until tomorrow it may be too late. Believe me, I am your friend, a friend of your cause."

"I do believe you; I could not connect you with deceit, but I am bewildered at this sudden exposure. Does Captain Grant also suspect my identity?"

"I think not—not yet, at least, for if he did you would be under arrest. But there are others here who would recognize you just as I have. There is no mystery about it. I was in Philadelphia when the Continental troops were here, and you were pointed out to me then. No, we have never met, yet I was sure I recognized you this afternoon."

"I was pointed out to you by whom?"

"My brother—my twin brother on the staff of General Lee."

"Did you not inform me your family were loyalists?"

"Yes, it is true," earnestly, her foot tapping the floor, as though annoyed at such persistent questioning. "I have a father and brother in the King's service—but one is a renegade, and I—"

"You are what?"

"I am merely a woman, sir, unable to determine whether to finally become a loyalist or rebel."

I looked gravely into her eyes until they fell, vowing their revelation of truth behind long lashes.

"Mistress Mortimer," I murmured, bending so close to her pink ear, I felt the soft touch of her hair on my lips.

"You puzzle me so charitably as to even puzzle me. But if I leave you now, as you request, I must first have promise of welcome again."

"Then you mean to return—a prisoner?" I am always merciful to the suffering.

"No, we are coming back to Philadelphia victors, and soon. I am not afraid to tell you. I have learned much today, and go back to report to Washington that the exchange of British commanders means the early evacuation of the city. When we meet again you will not be a lady of the Blended Rose, nor will I be wearing this uniform."

Her eyes sparkled brightly into mine, then dropped demurely.

"I—I rather like the colors you are wearing now, and am sure this dress is most becoming. I—I have a passion for masquerade."

"I recognize that, but have already discovered where I can read the truth beyond the masquerade—what is occurring now?"

She turned to look, attracted as I had been by the change and bustle about us. A few feet from where we stood conversing, large folding doors, previously concealed by draperies, were suddenly flung wide open, revealing a magnificent dining hall.

Dashed by the magnificent spectacle, I turned to my companion, unable to resist temptation. She must have instantly read the purpose in my face, for she grasped my sleeve.

"No, you must not think of remaining a moment longer. There will be a seat reserved for me, and Captain Grant is coming this way now. Something is wrong, I am sure; I have no time to explain, but promise me you will leave here at once—at once."

Her eyes, her words, were so insistent I could not refuse, although as I glanced about I felt convinced there was no danger in this assumption, not a familiar face meeting mine. At the instant Grant came up, bowing his way through the press, and staring insolently into my eyes, even as he bowed politely to the lady beside me.

"At least this is my privilege," he insisted, "unless there be another previous engagement of which I am ignorant."

"Oh, no," and she rested her hands on the green sleeve, smiling from his face into mine. "We were waiting for you to come. Goodnight, Lieutenant Fortesque."

They had taken a step or two, when Grant halted, holding her arm tightly as he glanced back to where I stood.

"Would Lieutenant Fortesque spare me a moment after I have found the lady a seat?" he questioned politely.

"Gladly, if you do not keep me waiting too long."

"Then there will be no delay. Shall we say the parlor below?"

I moved, conscious of the mute appeal in the lady's face, yet with no excuse for refusal.

"As well there as anywhere, sir."

Once again we bowed with all the punctilious ceremony of mutual dislike, and he whispered something into her ear as they disappeared in the stream of people. My cheeks burned with indignation at his cool insolence.

What could it mean? Was he merely seeking a quarrel, or was there something else concealed behind this request? In either case I knew not how to act, and yet felt no inclination to avoid the meeting. Studying over the situation I pushed my way through the crowd across the floor of the ballroom. There were a few people still lingering on the stairs, but, except for the servants, the parlor below were deserted. I walked the length of one of the great rooms, and halted in front of a fireplace to await Grant's coming.

I was eager to have this affair settled, and he of course, I comprehended now the risk I had assumed by remaining so long, and began to feel the cords of entanglement drawing about me. There was a door opposite where I stood, and, staring toward it, I saw it open slightly, and back in the darkness, the beckoning of a hand. Startled, yet realizing that it must mean me, I stepped closer, gripping the hilt of my sword, half suspecting treachery.

"Quick," and I recognized the deep contralto of the voice. "Don't stop to question; there is not a moment to lose."

CHAPTER V.

The Threat of Swords.
Stepping from the glare of those gleaming parlor lights into the gloom of that narrow passage, blinded me for the instant, yet a moment later, I became aware of the distant glimmer of a candle, the faint reflection revealing the girl's face.

"Please do not talk; do not ask anything—yet," she urged hurriedly, noiselessly closing the door at my back, and as instantly gripping my sleeve. Her breath came quickly; her voice trembled from suppressed excitement. "Come with me, beyond the light yonder."

I followed her guidance, bewildered, yet having every confidence the reason for this mysterious occurrence must be fully justified. The passage curved slightly, terminating at a closed door. Scarce a reflection of the candle reached us here, yet my eyes were by now sufficiently accustomed to the gloom so that I could trace the outlines of her face. A vague doubt took possession of me.

"You are causing me to run away from Grant," I protested blindly. "You are making me appear afraid to meet him."

"No, it is not that," swiftly. "He was not coming to you personally at all—you were to be arrested."

"What! He knew me then?"

"I am not sure—some one did, and mentioned his suspicions. Captain Grant was glad enough of an excuse, no doubt, but he, the soft voice faltering, "he made a mistake in twitting me for being friendly toward you."

"And you came to warn, to save me?" I exclaimed, pressing her hand.

"That was nothing, I could do no less. I am only glad I knew the way."

"You mean how you might reach me first?"

"Yes, it came to me in a flash when he left me alone. Only I was not certain in which parlor you would be waiting. I ran through the kitchen and down the back stairs; I helped the officers plan their decorations, and in that way learned of this, private passage beneath the stairs. It was easy, but—oh, listen! they are in there now!"

We could hear voices through the intervening wall clearly enough to even distinguish words, as the speakers uttered little restraint. I felt the girl's slender figure press against me in the narrow space where we stood, and I clung to her hand, both remaining motionless and silent.

"That fellow has run, Grant," boomed some one hoarsely. "Either afraid, or else what you say he is. See here, boy, did you see anyone in here lately in scarlet jacket?"

"I don't just remember, sah," answered a negro, hesitatingly. "I was busy over dar' cleanin' de sigeboas'd."

"Well, he's not here now, that's certain," broke in Grant impatiently, "and we've been in all the parlors? What next, MacHugh?"

"Try to head him off before he can get out of the city, of course. That's his game, probably. Osborne, have Carter come here at once. Why didn't you nab the fellow upstairs, Captain? Fool play that, sending him down here."

"I didn't wish to create a row in the ball-room; he was with Claire Mortimer."

"Oh, I see," laughing coarsely. "Something besides military duty involved, eh?"

"I'll trouble you to be a trifle more careful, MacHugh," Grant said stiffly. "The fellow did her a small service in the afternoon, and she couldn't refuse dancing with him, as he was in uniform, and apparently all right. I advise you to drop that part of the affair. Here's Carter now."

I could hear the click of the room-servant's spurs as he crossed the door. MacHugh chuckled.

"Touch about it just the same, I see; however we'll pass up the lady. Carter, there has been a spy in here tonight, calling himself Lieutenant Fortesque, of the 42nd Regiment. He came through the lines this morning with despatches for Howe. I understand. Did you meet him?"

"No, sir, but one of my men was hiding about with him all day—Watts; I heard him telling about it an hour ago."

"Is that so? Where'd they go?"

"Covered everything, I judge, from Fallowhill to the Lower Battery. Watts said he asked questions of everybody they met, but he didn't take any notes. He liked the fellow, but thought he was mighty inquisitive. Where's he now, sir?"

"The devil knows, I don't, and you'll have to find out. He'll head north-west likely, he'll never try to cross the river here. How many men have you?"

"Twenty."

"Scatter them to every north post. The fellow had no horse, and your troopers can easily get ahead of him. Hurry up now." Carter departed with click of steel, and MacHugh evidently turned to his companion.

"Well, I catch the lad all right. Grant. Some of those outposts will nab him before daylight. No use our waiting around here, let's go back upstairs."

The girl's nervous grasp on my arm tightened, her lips pressed close to my ear.

"I must get back to my place at the table," she whispered. "Surely you know what to do, this is a rear door, there are stables a hundred feet away, you must get a horse, and ride fast—you will do this?"

"Yes, of course—but how can I thank you?"

"Don't try, don't ever even think of it again. I hardly know what mad impulse sent me here. Now I have but one thought—to hurry you away, and get safely back myself—you will go?"

"Yes, but—"

"Not now! There is no time for explanation, promises, anything. You heard what they said, every avenue of escape will be blocked within an hour. If you go at once you can outstride them—please, please go!"

She held out her hand, and I grasped it warmly, unable longer to war against the pitiful appeal in her voice.

"Yes, I'll go, at once. But I take away with me a memory which will never permit me to be satisfied until we meet again. We have been together so short a time."

"Had it been longer," she interrupted, "you would know me better, and care less, perhaps. I am a sham, a cheat," a trifle of bitterness in the tone. "You will learn all that some day and laugh at yourself. Oh, I know you will, so not another word, sir. I am going; then, perhaps, you will."

There was a slight pressure of her fingers, and she had vanished so quick I could only stare blindly along the deserted passage. Yet an instant later, the peril of my predicament flashed back upon my mind, and I faced the immediate necessity for action. What her strange words might mean could not be interpreted, I made no attempt to comprehend. Now I must find means of escape, and learn the truth later. I opened the door cautiously, and stepped without every nerve taut, every muscle braced for action. It was a starlit night, and the numerous rear windows of the manation cast a glare of light for some distance. The dark shadow of a high fence alone promised concealment, and, holding my sword tightly, I crept in that direction, breathing again more freely as I reached its protection.

Unobserved there was a guard stationed before the stable door—a Grenadier, from the outline of his hat—and others, a little group, were sitting on the grass a dozen feet away. If they had not been already warned I might gain a horse by boldness, but the probability was that here was where Carter had mounted his squad, and I would merely walk forward into a trap. I was better chance the possibility that some visitor had left a horse tied in front, or to one of the stands. With this possibility in mind I turned and skirted the house, making myself as inconspicuous as possible. There were soldiers on the outside steps; I heard their voices without seeing them, and was thus driven to run swiftly across an open space, memory guiding me toward the opposite pavilion. Breathless, with heart beating fast, I crouched low in the shadow, endeavoring to make out my more immediate surroundings. There were no horses there, but I could clearly distinguish the stomping of restless hoofs somewhere to the right. As I straightened up, determined upon discovering an empty stable if possible, the figure of a man suddenly loomed directly in front, advancing toward me. In startled surprise I took one step backward, but was too late. Already the eyes of the newcomer had perceived my presence, and he sprang forward, tugging at his sword.

"Hold on there! hold on!" he commanded shrilly. "Who are you? What the devil are you skulking about out here for?"

It was Grant beyond a doubt; I would recognize the peculiar snarl of that voice in a thousand. He had not gone upstairs then, had not rejoined the lady in the dining room. What would she think of his absence?

What would she do when she realized its probable meaning? Somehow I was not frightened, at this meeting him, but glad—if those others would only keep away, and let us settle the affair between us. Here was his test—a coward would cry out an alarm, summon the guard to his assistance, but if the fellow's nerve only held, or if he hated me badly enough, he'd fight it out alone. All this came to me in a flash, and the words of challenge spoken before he even grasped the thought of who I was.

"So I have discovered you, have I? Why did you fail to keep our appointment within?"

He drew up sharply with an oath, peering at me through the dark, bewildered by my speech.

"The spy! Ye gods what luck! Do you mean to insinuate I ran away, sir?"

"How else could I interpret it?" I questioned coolly, determined to taunt him to action. "I waited where you told me till I was tired. Perhaps you will oblige me by explaining your purpose."

He muttered something, but without comprehending its purport I went on threateningly.

"And I think you made use of the word spy just now. Did you mistake me for another?"

"Mistake you? No; I'd know you in hell," he burst forth, anger making his voice tremble. "I called you a spy, and you are one, you sneaking night rat. You never waited for me in the parlor; if you had you'd now be under arrest."

"Oh, so that was the plan?"

"Yes, that was it, Mister Lieutenant Fortesque."

"Well, Grant," I said sternly, "I've got just one answer to make you. You can call your guard, or you can fight it out with me here. Whichever you choose will depend upon whether you are a man, or a cur. I took a step nearer, watching him as best I could in the dark. "You are an unmitigated liar, sir," and with sudden sweep of the arm I struck him with open hand. "Probably you will realize what that means."

For an instant he remained as still. I doubted him, even held him cheap, then the breath surged through his clenched teeth in a mad oath. He surged toward me, but my sword was out, the steel blocking his advance.

"You—you actually mean fight?"

"Why not? Isn't that cause enough? If not I will furnish more."

"I do not fight spies—"

"Stop! That silly charge is merely an excuse. You do not believe it yourself. You wanted a quarrel yonder in the ball room. The expression of your eyes was an insult. Don't evade now. I am here, wearing the uniform of the British army. I have every right of a gentleman, and you will cross swords, or I'll brand you coward wherever there is an English garrison."

I saw the sudden flash of his drawn blade, and flung up my own in guard.

"Wait, not here, Captain. I insisted quickly. We're far too near your watchful friends yonder, besides the light is poor. Let's try our fortunes beyond the pavilion, where it can be simply man to man."

He turned without a word, and I followed, eager enough to have done with the business. The stars gleamed on the naked weapons held in our hands, but we exchanged no words until we had rounded the corner and come forth into the open space beyond.
